Teaching methods :	The approach is varied: unseen texts, listening exercises, visual aids, recordings, comic strips, videos etc. Each lesson will have a theme, sometimes a very broad one, of Chinese culture, traditions, history, language, legends etc, and very specific points of grammar (time-measure complements, directional complements, correlative adverbs, passive particles, relative clauses etc) Each 4-hour lesson is made up as follows: 60% oral, 40% written work. Active learning and memorization of ideograms has to be done at home.
Content :	The course aims to enable students to speak the Chinese language fluently and understand it well. It enables them to read texts on various subjects with the aid of a dictionary, and to write texts themselves. In addition, the most important aspects of grammar and the grammatical and lexical particularities of Chinese are studied, enabling students to continue their study of the language autonomously after the course.
Bibliography :	There are 2 volumes of course notes to accompany the course: one contains ideograms and one the course notes as follows: -- Vocabulary and ideograms of the week -- Vocabulary exercises -- Grammar exercises -- Reading and translation exercises -- Texts to be studied (simplified and unabridged versions) -- Weekly homework -- Cultural texts CDs with exercises for each topic are also available for the advanced level course. Newspapers can be provided for extra reading if students ask (e.g. for articles on economics).
