Main themes :	Study of Coptic, the historic language of Christian Egypt. Alternately with LGLOR 2732, this course is taught to students of two different levels, but with one part in common. In the first term (15 hours), it gives beginners an initiation into the Sahidic dialect, while students who have already started, continue with the translation of texts in this same dialect. In the second term, all the students continue their reading of Sahidic texts and in addition start to study Bohairic, by means of a commented reading of a number of texts written in this dialect.
Aims :	At the end of this course, the student will be capable of reading, translating a text of average difficulty. To achieve this goal, he will have learnt the script, a basic vocabulary, the use of Crum's dictionary and the bases of the grammar. The contribution of this Teaching Unit to the development and command of the skills and learning outcomes of the programme(s) can be accessed at the end of this sheet, in the section entitled "Programmes/courses offering this Teaching Unit".
Evaluation methods :	There will be a written exam in the June session. However, a partial exam will be organised in January for the "initiation".
Teaching methods :	The "initiation" consists of lectures, which include practical exercises. The second part consists of an introduction followed by reading and guided translation exercises. In addition, a number of academic studies on the thematic being studied will be introduced.
Content :	For the beginners, the 15 hours initiation into the Sahidic dialect will allow them to learn the script and reading, a basic vocabulary, the morphology and syntax; it will continue with a commented translation of the New Testament. The other students will translate, on their own, a selection of texts. All the students will be together in the second term, to read Sahidic and Bohairic texts, belonging essentially to the domain of hagiography and ecclesiastical historiography.
