Content :	TU LINTP2602 « Introduction to simultaneous interpreting, English-French », combines with the TUs devoted to consecutive interpreting techniques to provide students with a first set of interpreting skills. One of the main aims of this TU is to teach students how to deal with listening, processing and speaking tasks simultaneously. Working on short speeches, students will progressively acquire the right balance between listening and speaking volumes and get acquainted with the booth and computer equipment. They will practice on the various aspects of simultaneous interpreting, one at a time first and collectively later so as to develop an efficient English-to-French transfer technique. Short exercises will be followed by genuine speeches in English, dealing with issues related to one or two major topics; political, economic, scientific or cultural, so that students can improve their knowledge of both the topic and the associated terminology/phraseology. This TU focusses mainly on: 1 listening skills and analysis: how is the speech organized? What is the structure of the text? What is the core message? What is the purpose of the speech? What is the tone? 2 conveying the message as precisely as possible (with all due respect to shades of meaning) in a natural and fluent French, Students will work on various topics and fields, various accents and registers; they will also be given the opportunity to keep upgrading their already thorough knowledge of French.
