This biannual learning unit is not being organized in 2018-2019 !

Teacher(s)	Auwers Jean-Marie ;SOMEBODY ;
Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Main themes	Study of the Greek of the New Testament. Alternating with LGLOR2782, (the Septuagint translators) the course provides an introduction to specific questions of morphology, syntax, and vocabulary which arise from the body of New testament texts. Particular attention is given to the specific influences of this type of language, whether of Semitisms or Latinisms, or literary genres, or indications of translation or phenomena of bilingualism. Biblical students should familiarise themselves with the tools of classical philology, the students of philology with the tools of bible studies.
Aims	At the the end of this course, the student will be capable of reading with profit the New Testament in its Greek text, with the aid of the appropriate grammar and dictionaries. He will be able to find in it the specialities of the bible Koine, and to get the best out of printed and computer based work tools (dictionaries both general and specific, concordances grammars and encyclopedias). ----- The contribution of this Teaching Unit to the development and command of the skills and learning outcomes of the programme(s) can be accessed at the end of this sheet, in the section entitled "Programmes/courses offering this Teaching Unit".
Evaluation methods	Continuous assessment (30%), with an oral exam covering the texts seen during the course (40%), and reading of one or several texts from the New Testament (30%).
Teaching methods	The active participation of the students is a prerequisite, and the texts to be studied will be indicated at the start of the course. They should prepare their own translation of these texts.
Content	The course consists of a thorough and commented reading (from a linguistic and grammatical point of view) of the texts of the New Testament ( and, incidentally of the apocryphal texts and those of the early church Fathers) which are representative of different literary genres. The course also includes a systematic revision of Greek grammar. There will be an introduction the principals of accenting, for those students who have not yet acquired it.
Inline resources	The students can obtain from the Moodle server a bibliography, a text on Greek accenting and other working tools.
