However, during the second part, they will have open internet access. All in all, the exam will last 2.5 hours. Comments will be written in the footnote so as to validate the translator's terminological choice. The final grade takes practical work and active involvement in account (20 %).
Teaching methods	The methodology is based on the cognitive strategies (the documentary search of parallel texts), the metacognitive strategies (allow the translation's description to go beyond the result in order to incorporate the cognitive process) and the compared translations. Practical translation work to find meaning and wording similarities within the original text. The student should avoid to 'fall under the grip of his dictionary' while translating. Compare his or her point of view to the other students' in order to pass a critical judgement. Apply the practices of the Journalism and International Institutions Style Guides. Individual marking.
