Main themes	- Origin and development of the concept of europeanisation. - Mechanisms and methods in the study of europeanisation.
Aims	The course has a twofold aim. (i) The course intends to give the students an analytical overview of (a) the way in which the European integration process has an impact on the institutional structure, policies and political processes in the member states; and (b) the processes that shape the national preferences of member state to participate in EU decision-making. (ii) The course intends to contribute to train students in conducting empirical research on the Europeanization; to present the findings of their research in an oral presentation and a written paper; and to discuss the research of their fellow students in a critical and constructive way. 1 ----- The contribution of this Teaching Unit to the development and command of the skills and learning outcomes of the programme(s) can be accessed at the end of this sheet, in the section entitled "Programmes/courses offering this Teaching Unit".
Evaluation methods	Due to the COVID-19 crisis, the information in this section is particularly likely to change. In January, the paper counts for 70% of the grades; the oral presentation for 20% and the feedback to fellow students for 10%. As the oral presentation cannot be redone and as there are no presentations to discuss in August, 100% of the grades of the August session will be on the paper. However, in order to compensate, the requirements for the paper in August can differ from the requirements for the paper in January (details in the annually updated syllabus).
Content	The course encompasses several conceptual and theoretical approaches in the study of europeanisation processes, with a particular emphasis on intra-paradigmatic variabilities and debates. It covers aspects of the europeanisation of the policies, politics and even of the institutional system of the member states. The course consists of two main parts. First, a series of lectures introduce several conceptual and theoretical approaches in the study of europeanisation. Second, students will have to carry out empirical research based on Europeanisation theories and approaches on a specific case study. They have to present the results of their research, discuss each other work critically, and write a final paper.
