⚠ This biannual learning unit is not being organized in 2021-2022 !

Teacher(s)	Cannuyer Christian ;Obsomer Claude ;
Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Prerequisites	No prerequisite
Main themes	Grammatical initiation and practical training on Coptic Saidic language, from the outset by reading various easy texts (Bible, Gnostic texts, apophtegmas ...). If the student has some knowledge of ancient Egyptian, we will insist on the diachronic approach. If the student is already initiated to Coptic, further study of Saidic, initiation to other dialects and to reading of manuscript texts.
Learning outcomes	At the end of this learning unit, the student is able to : read and translate Coptic texts of average difficulty, with the help of the usual grammars and dictionaries.
Evaluation methods	Written exam.
Teaching methods	The "initiation" consists of lectures, which include practical exercises. The second part consists of an introduction followed by reading and guided translation exercises. In addition, a number of academic studies on the thematic being studied will be introduced.
Content	For the beginners, the 15 hours initiation into the Sahidic dialect will allow them to learn the script and reading, a basic vocabulary, the morphology and syntax; it will continue with a commented translation of the New Testament. The other students will translate, on their own, a selection of texts. Then, all the students will be together to read Sahidic and Boharic texts, belonging essentially to the domain of hagiography and ecclesiastical historiography.
Inline resources	The initiation syllabus and the matter covered in the second term are available on the Moodle server.
