Teaching methods	Introduction with contextual and historical markers, problematisation of historiographical and institutional frameworks for Dutch (Belgian) postcolonial literature. Critical analysis of the primary texts under study on the basis of the post- and decolonial analytical paradigms presented and discussed. Lectures supported by audio-visual, multimedia materials and combined with interactive activities. The students are expected to do some preparatory reading and research in order to take part in the discussion. If numbers permit, the course will be designed as a seminar.
Content	The course deals with the representation of the Belgian colonial past in Dutch-language literary texts. This colonial history has given rise to an important Dutch-language literary production from the end of the 19th century onward. We will try to understand how different authors, from the colonial and post-independence period until today, write the Congo and to the development of which memory/ies their texts contribute. Starting from a delimited but representative corpus of prose, we will examine how these literary texts, in a singular way, are related to a specific process of fictionalisation as imaginary works and defictionalisation of fiction. We will also examine how these texts deal with testimonies, autobiography and voicing. Finally, we will question how these texts are part of processes of consecration, canonization, invisibilisation. We will adopt a contextual approach - taking into account the specificity of the Belgian and Congolese contexts - and a comparative approach - questioning in a contrastive way, in connection with the discourses of time in other linguistic areas, the positioning of Flemish (in a multilingual situation) and Dutch postcolonial literature.
