Evaluation methods	The assessment grade will be composed as follows : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Volume 1, the lecture course, includes 30% for continuous assessment and 70% for the final exam, which will be written. The final mark of the lecture course will make up 50% of the overall mark.</li> <li>• Volume 2, practical course, includes 60% for continuous assessment (which consists of the preparation of a portfolio of activities) and 40% for the final exam, which will be oral. The final mark for the practical course will make up 50% of the overall mark.</li> </ul> The June session: There will be a written exam for the lecture and an oral exam for the practical course. Both will be face-to-face or, if the "covid" situation requires it, online, via Teams. The September session: for the lecture course there will be a written examination which no longer takes into account continuous assessment; and for the practical course there will be an oral examination and the preparation of a portfolio of activities, details of which will be given on Moodle, to be handed in on the day of the examination. Both tests (written and oral) will take place face-to-face or, if the "covid" situation requires it, online, through Teams
Teaching methods	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. The lecture will favour a reverse teaching dynamic, i.e. participants will have readings to do before each class session, which will focus on these prior readings. It will also offer different modalities of writing exercises focusing on analysis, synthesis, description, argumentation, interpretation, narration.</li> <li>2. The practical course will also favour the reversed pedagogy and will include a multiplicity of exercises, both oral and written, of comprehension and expression of the language, aiming at the translation and interpretation operations and linked to subjects of Hispanic culture and history.</li> <li>3. Both parts of the course will make extensive use of the Moodle platform (a communication channel between students and professors) for the submission of documents, sharing URLs, handing in assignments, providing information, participating in forums, etc.</li> </ol> Teams will be the communication platform when the Covid situation requires online teaching. The co-modal format of courses will also be considered in these pandemic conditions
Content	The course is structured in two volumes or parts : <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Volume 1, "lecture", given by Mauricio Narváez.</li> <li>2. Volume 2, "practical course", given by Paloma Riera.</li> </ol> However, this distinction is not very clear-cut : the lecture course also includes exercises and the practice course includes theoretical aspects. Furthermore, in terms of content, the course is made up of two poles: culture and language ; but, by the very nature of these two poles, they will be constantly integrated: we will approach culture through language and language through culture. With this dynamic, the course proposes: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. for the culture pole, the study of the most significant events in the history (especially modern and contemporary) of Spain and Hispanic Latin America in the fields of art, thought, politics, society, language and translation.</li> <li>2. for the language pole (in its descriptive, narrative and discursive dimensions), the courses propose the study of the morphosyntactic evolution of Spanish; the study of vocabulary and phraseology around different subjects (geography, territorial particularities, political system, economy, environment, population, employment, health, teaching, etc.) and the resolution of situations in the practice of translation and/or interpretation.</li> </ol>
