This course is taught in the 1st semester

Teacher(s): Paul Deproost
Language: french
Level: 2nd cycle course

Aims

To give the students an overview of Medieval Latin literature and underline its place in European cultural history.

Main themes

The major moments of Medieval literature, emphasizing the genres and their specificity: the Ancient origin of certain genres and the metamorphosis these underwent with the advent of Christianity. The relationship this literature bears to previous literature in Latin. Literary creations: human beings, works, areas. The plurality and the extension of the very concept of literature in this period: the problem of encyclopedic classification, of bestiary fables, of lapidaries, of sermons, of geography, etc.

Examine how this body of Medieval literature influenced the vernacular literatures of the time and beyond. The repercussions this literature had on certain themes and works of European literature.
