[30h] 5 credits

Teacher(s): Christian de Visscher, Frédéric Varone
Language: french
Level: 2nd cycle course

Aims

Presentation and critical discussion of theories and/or issues relating to public sector management or administrative science. Theme chosen for 2001 2002: 'Public services: liberalisation of the markets and transformation of historical operators'. Preparation for dissertation: learning to identify a subject, choose a methodological approach, putting together a bibliographical note, and articulating arguments clearly. Learning about group communications and the constructive criticism of work.

Main themes

Introduction to theoretical approaches in respect of liberalisation, privatisation and the regulation of public services. Preparation by each student of a case study looking at the growth of a historical operator (e.g. Belgacom and the Post Office (La Poste)) operating in each of the sectors under examination (e.g. telecommunications and the postal service), and using an analytical grid provided by teaching staff. Presentation of, and discussion on, each report in the presence of an invited expert.

Content and teaching methods

Each piece of work consists of a case study on the transformation of a historical operation on a particular public service network in any country. The case study will be structured around the following main points that embrace one of the historical operator's sequential development logic:

1. historical development of the sector (economic and social issues, political actors, operators, and technological developments) and institutionalisation of the historical operator (the public sector enterprise's monopoly on the market);
2. factors in changing opinions on the liberalisation of the sector and/or on privatisation of the historical operator (technological, economic and political factors); underlining the role of European Union policy as a factor of change;
3. organisational transformation of the historical operator (change in legal status, management/delivery contract, changes in the financial situation, missions/obligations in respect of service for all);
4. a personal appreciation of the transformations observed in the sector under examination.
