ROM2260 Explanation on French authors of the Middle Ages II

[30h] 3.5 credits

This two-yearly course is taught in 2005-2006, 2007-2008,...

This course is taught in the 2nd semester

Teacher(s): Claude Thiry
Language: french
Level: 2nd cycle course

Aims

To perform the in-depth internal analysis of a work or of several related productions of old and Middle French, so as to improve the students' analytical mind and to open their minds to diversified critical approaches.

Main themes

In-depth internal analysis of a work or of several related productions, having the student pay attention to the textual, generic and thematic problems. So, depending on the calendar year, we will study Villon, the short stories in Old and Middle French,...

Content and teaching methods

Ex Cathedra course. Like ROM 2250, the aim is to complete the education on Medieval French literature, through the in-depth internal study of a work, an author or of several related productions. The course should make the link between Old and Middle French, by making some room for the extension of the study subject, or for the tradition or by choosing a subject present in both ages. By "internal" study, we mean taking into account all the elements likely to enlighten texts as transmitted to us, and thus making the student aware of the different ways of criticism and of the generic marks. It is only after we have been through this philosophical type of explanation, that we can make some diversified enlightenment critics, which are sometimes conflicting. A good example is for the moment : Villon (and the clause tradition (tradition testamentaire) ; Rutebeuf and Deschamps on the problems of power and poverty.
