Content and teaching methods

2001-2002 :

"Begin and end a gospel account"

"Narrative analysis places very special importance on the way of beginning and ending an account. The course will examine how the evangelists assist their readers in passing from their daily time to the time of the account, then in how to return from the second to the first. Research will first be done on the Gospel of Mark. Students will then do the same type research on one of the other gospels of their choosing."
