

Open Faculty of Economic and Social Politics

OPES2224 Economic and social actors in Europe

[30h]

Teacher(s): Pierre Jonckheer
Language: French
Level: Second cycle

Aims

At the end of this course, the students will be able :

- to analyze the orientations of the economic and social policies as defined inside the institutions of the European Union
- to master the present stakes of the european politics : projets of a Constitution, Union's enlargement
- to determine the interactions between the strategies of different economic and social actors and their influence on the economic and social reality

Main themes

This course presents the political and juridical regime that constitutes the European Union, as well as the examination of its development projects, its stakes and the debates which they arouse (European Constitution, enlargement, ...).

A second part is dedicated to a more extensive examination of certain Union's policies, especially in the economic and social field. The position of the actors and the examination of the questions of the moment shall feed the reports and the discussion.