Programme management

IAG Département d'administration et de gestion

Responsable académique : Paul Belleflamme

Study objectives

The second university study cycle programme ("licence" in Management covers three years of studies. It develops training in Management with a distinct orientation towards the application of quantitative methods and computer studies in management and also includes sound training in the Exact Sciences, Technology and Industrial Environment.

This programme offers the choice between three orientations : a general orientation, a CEMS orientation and a "Company Creation" orientation.

The CEMS orientation of the "licence" in Management enables the student to obtain in addition, and in the context of the three study years of the programme, the CEMS (Community of European Management Schools) Master. This supplementary diploma is jointly delivered by the European university management schools which make up the "Community of European Management Schools" (CEMS) ; these currently number 17 : Erasmus Universiteit (Rotterdam), ESADE (Barcelona), HEC (Paris), Helsinki School of Economics and BA (FI), IAG (UCL - Louvain-la-Neuve), Università Luigi Bocconi (Milan), Universität zu Köln (Cologne), Copenhagen Business School, Universität St Gallen (CH), London School of Economics, Stockholm School of Economics, Wirtschaftsuniversität Wien, Norwegian School of Economics and Business Administration (Bergen), Budapest University of Economic Sciences (HU), University of Economics Prague, Warsaw School of Economics et University College Dublin (Ireland). To obtain this diploma, besides a specific choice of courses in the context of the CEMS orientation, the student will have to acquire an international experience via a six-month stay in a foreign country (one semester of 3rd year courses in a CEMS school and 10 weeks abroad) and demonstrate in-depth knowledge of 2 foreign languages (information is available at the secretary's office).

The "Company Creation" orientation " is an interdisciplinary training course addressing students following the "licence" programme in Management, the " licence" in Law and in Civil Engineering. It aims at jointly preparing the students from the three programmes to work together on the conditions for creating a new company. It culminates in the writing of a common thesis in teams of three (one student per programme) - a thesis of which the final objective is the real creation of a small to medium-sized company.
