PSY2000

Questions in religious sciences

[15h] 1.5 credits

This course is not taught in 2006-2007

Teacher(s): Philippe Cochinaux
Language: French
Level: Second cycle

Aims

to treat a question about Christian faith. It is in fact a human sciences course, as, like every human science, it could contribute to give a human being an understanding of himself through the confrontation with the important questions that throughout the ages have questioned everyone.

Main themes

The content will be chosen in the corpus of Christian faith (e.g. God, the Gospel, the problem of evil, Christian ethics, etc.). That is not a matter to take the place of a professional finality of the Faculty (as for example, psychologists ethics or deontology). It is a course of religious formation and information, such as a student could require, with the same rule of rigour expected from every University teaching. As it turns on a subject of Christian faith, this course can as well and at the same time show its anthropological relevance for those who do not believe, and the truth and sense of faith for those who want to deepen it.

Other information (prerequisite, evaluation (assessment methods), course materials recommended readings, ...)

The teacher should take into account the sensibility and the formation of a psychologists audience.
