This course is taught in the 1st and 2nd semester

Teacher(s): Claude Thiry
Language: French
Level: Second cycle

Aims

To perform the in-depth internal analysis of a work or of several related productions of Old and Middle French, so as to improve the students' analytical mind and to open their minds to diversified critical approaches on a theme or representation style in both language states (Old and Middle French).

Main themes

In-depth internal analysis of a work or of several related productions, taking a theme (for instance ; jail, poverty,...) or a composition style (for instance : allegory) into account.

Content and teaching methods

Ex cathedra course. Like ROM 2260, the aim is to complete the education on Medieval French literature, through the in-depth internal study of a work, an author or of several related productions. The course should make the link between Old and Middle French. It is organized around one theme (for instance ; jail, poverty, death...) or a composition style recurrent in both periods (for instance : allegory). As in the course 2260, we focus on the philosophical explanation type, with openings to evolutive observation of texts seen and to critical approaches on the question considered. Thanks to a bibliography, the students can orientate themselves in the critical tendencies and personal reading in this field is advised.

Other information (prerequisite, evaluation (assessment methods), course materials recommended readings, ...)

Oral exam on the subjects seen and on personal reading.

The published works when available. If not, file with personal texts coming from critics or personal publishing.
