Study objectives

This programme aims to develop communication skills in foreign languages in companies (business language) and to familiarise students with the business world through lectures, exercises and seminars on management, communication and work sciences. There is also a traineeship in a company for at least four weeks and a thesis.

Admission conditions

This programme is open to students holding a graduate degree or equivalent subject to the conditions determined by the Faculty authorities. It is also open to students enrolled in their final year of undergraduate studies. In the latter case, the master's degree can only be conferred one year after the bachelor's degree is awarded.

There are two prerequisites :

- Students must have passed, in their undergraduate degree, courses in at least three of the following areas : economics, management, law, computer studies, communication and sociology (a course in economics is compulsory). Otherwise, students must add the course or courses which are missing to their programme.
- To take a "major" language (German, English and Dutch), candidates must provide proof of at least level B1+ in the Common European Framework Reference for Languages (CECR) ['independent upper average user' level]. If no official documents are available, students have to pass a language test relating to the receptive communicative skills (listening and reading comprehension). This level test is organised by the Department.

Admission procedures

The University admission and enrolment procedures are detailed in "General Information" on the WEB page :

<http://www.ucl.ac.be/etudes/programme.html>

General structure of the programme

This two-year programme (120 credits) includes lectures, exercises and seminars, a traineeship in a company of at least four weeks and a thesis.

1.2. Thesis including traineeship (28 credits)

Students must complete a traineeship of at least 4 weeks in a company either in Belgium or abroad. It must enable the students to practise the major language being studied. (cf. 2) and to acquire a first professional experience. At the end of the traineeship, the student is required to submit a thesis written in the major language (or in one of the major languages studied), within the deadline fixed by the programme management Committee. The thesis will also be presented orally.

Students must follow a seminar to accompany their thesis (2 credits).

2. Specialisation in a "Business Language" (30 credits)

Students have to choose from among the following :

- specialisation in Business Language (German, English)
- specialisation in Business Language(English, Dutch);
- specialisation in Business Language (German, Dutch);
- specialisation in Business Language (German);
- specialisation in Business Language (English);
- specialisation in Business Language (Dutch).

The first three specialisations include courses in two major languages and the three last in one major language and two minor languages.

To enrol in a "major language", students must prove at least level 'B1+' on the European Common Framework Reference for Languages (CECR), cf. : <http://culture2.coe.int/portfolio/documents/cadrecommun.pdf> [level "average upper independent user"]. In the absence of an official document from the 'Institut des Langues Vivantes' of UCL, the "Cambridge Examinations Syndicate", the "Goethe Institut", or the "Certificaat Nederlands als Vreemde Taal" etc. certifying the level of competence, access to the Master's programme will be subject to a language test (also see prerequisites and admission conditions mentioned above).

For each "major language", there are lectures, seminars and exercises focusing on communication, both oral and written, in a business context. All these activities are conducted in the major language.

The minor language courses (9 credits per minor language/year) introduce students to an additional foreign language or help improve their competence in one of the languages offered (at beginner, intermediate and advanced levels). Students may choose between the following languages taught at the Institut des Langues Vivantes : German, Arabic, Chinese, Spanish, French (only for non-Francophone students), Italian, Japanese, Dutch, Portuguese or Russian.

Please note, however, that not all these languages are taught at every level (beginner, intermediate and advanced) every year. It is therefore necessary to check via the Institut des langues vivantes (tel. 010/474363 or 4364).

In view of timetable constraints, it is highly recommended that students choose a Germanic language as one of the two minor languages.
